

Wrapping up and preparing for a New Year

What do a Midwinter Ball, an Indonesian Market Outlook, a panel discussion on healthy lifestyles and a networking event with e-commerce theme have in common? They're all a sample of the recent inspiring activities at SwedCham. It is nothing short of great to see the interest and the member engagement at these events. Thank you to everyone who has participated.

This fall has offered a fresh start for the Swedish connected Young Professionals in Singapore, who have set off with a new board and a number of networking events. Please give a heads up to the young talent in your organizations as they will surely enjoy this forum.

We still have several interesting events ahead of us before Christmas, starting with a trend spotting breakfast with Lynxeye on November 29, moving on to a Nordic Ambassadors' Luncheon on December 10 focusing on sustainability and finishing with a Lucia breakfast on Mobile Banking on December 13, don't miss out on the saffron buns.

On a less public note, we are also reaching out and meeting as many partners and members as we can. We want to listen to your stories and discuss how we can be a better organization for you going forward. If you are interested in talking to us, please reach out. We are only an e-mail away.

Did you see the ticket release to the show How to Become Swedish in 60 Minutes? This one will not disappoint – we hope to see a lot of tickets under the Christmas tree!

Swedish Company and Swede of the Year 2018

The Jury's Motivation for Annelie Nikou - Swede of the Year 2018

For her long-time commitment and achievements, contributing in a broad spectrum of forums, big and small, for the Swedish community in Singapore. For five years, she has been the backbone of the Swedish Supplementary Education School, supporting it becoming the success story it is today. She organises the vastly appreciated yearly St Lucia celebrations and she has been a supportive and driving force within SWEA for years. Her compassion and dedication went far beyond the expected earlier this year when she organised the emergency support for an old Swedish couple who were hospitalized in Singapore

The Jury's motivation for Atlas Copco - Swedish Company of the Year 2018

Since refocusing it's Southeast Asia strategy three years ago, this company has emerged as one of the fastest growing Swedish corporations in the region with an average growth pace of 20 per cent per year. And amidst rapid expansion, this company leads by example, for example engaging in its Water4all project, making sure one Indonesian village per year is equipped to produce clean water for its people.
